ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A golf club head that includes several slotted apertures that extend through the body of the club head, the slotted apertures being defined by several generally parallel, spaced-apart elongated spring members, the spring members can be used to create a lower stiffness at their mid-section rather than their ends.